

CITY OF FALLS CHURCH

Lawrence Webb Council Member

The Honorable Lawrence Webb is an Assistant Dean of Admissions at the University of Mary Washington. In recent years, Mr. Webb has developed a passion for assisting students seeking higher education. Through this effort, he has given back by working with the James Farmer Scholars Program. This program helps to increase the number of and motivate underrepresented students who are interested in attending institutions of higher education through college and university visits, cultural and recreational activities, seminars, and academic guidance. Prior to working at University of Mary Washington, he was employed at Shenandoah University in the Admissions and Alumni Affairs offices.

Mr. Webb, a Kenbridge, Virginia, native also serves on the State Department of Correctional Education Board (appointed by former Governor Mark Warner in 2004). Mr. Webb's service to the City of Falls Church includes three years on the Recreation & Parks Advisory Board.

Mr. Webb possesses a B.A. in Mass Communications and a graduate Certificate in Public Management from Shenandoah University. While attending Shenandoah University, he became highly involved in campus politics and was elected the university's first African-American president of the Student Government Association.

Since 2004, Mr. Webb has lived in the City with his partner, Clifton Taylor.

Mr. Webb was first sworn in as member of City Council on July 1, 2008.
